LAFEAN, COLE AND GRIM CARRY ADAMS COUNTY

Congressman is Re-elected by Big Majority in York and Adams Counties. Cole has Majority Reduced but is Re-elected. Grim Gets Vote for Governorship. Tener Second.

Daniel F. Lafean is returned to Congress with a majority of 1700 in York county and 284 in Adams County. James C. Cole is re-elected to the state legislature with a margin of 138; and Grim carried the county in the gubernatorial contest by 188. This in brief is the result of Tuesday's local election. The general returns from this and other states appear on pages 2 and 3. The County totals are as follows:

GOVERNOR
Grim D	2218
Tener R	2630
Berry K	1821
CONGRESS
Lafean R	3167
Brodbeck D	2883
STATE LEGISLATURE
Cole D	3022
Eldon R	2884

In the voting for Governor the manner in which the Democrats stuck to Grim was the subject of much comment, in the strong Democratic districts the Berry vote being largely Republican. Berry ran exceptionally strong at a number of places. He carried the First Ward, Gettysburg, by a big majority, losing the other two by such small numbers that he carried the town. In Fairfield he polled 70 votes while neither of the two candidates got more than 15.

Mr. Lafean's big majority in York County and his substantial lead here attest the popularity of the Congressman. In Hanover, his opponent's own town, he had a margin of almost 500 while carrying Mr. Brodbeck's own ward. Mr. Lafean made big gains in many of the Adams County districts over four years ago when he lost the county by 97. In a number of the districts he fell a few behind, only one or two cutting him to any great extent.

The race for state legislature was close and exciting. The early returns showed Cole rapidly losing ground and it was thought that Mr. Eldon would be Adams County's next representative at Harrisburg. Two years ago Mr. Cole had a majority of 330 and this was cut down until he had only 138 to the good. A peculiar feature in receiving the election returns was the fact that at eleven o'clock the Republican headquarters conceded the election of Cole by 190 while the Democrats conceded the election of Eldon by the same figure. Comparison of figures straightened matters out and it was seen that Cole had sufficient margin to make him safe.

Jacob Sharretts, Democratic candidate for Director of the Poor, polled a substantial vote. Norman S. Heindel also ran, polling a vote of 17 in Gettysburg and scattering votes in one or two county districts.

The rapidity with which the returns came in on election night from all sections of the county was very gratifying to those waiting for the results. At half past eleven o'clock every district but two had been heard from, a condition never before known here. The promptness with which the returns were sent in was attributed largely to the extended telephone service in many sections of the county.

ADAMS COUNTY IS PROSPEROUS

Well Known Adams County Farmer Says that the County is just now Closing One of its Most Prosperous Years.

A well known Adams County farmer today discussed the closing of the summer and fall seasons in a most optimistic manner claiming that the county had one of the most profitable years in its history. He said,

"Almost every crop which is raised by Adams County farmers was a success this year. Wheat, oats, rye, hay and all the other crops were abundant and in some of them we had almost record breaking yields. We heard plenty of talk early in the year about a shortage in the corn yield but that story fell flat long ago and it now looks as though the yield will be somewhat above the average."

"Up in the upper end of the county it is all apple talk. The biggest yield of apples that the county has ever seen is being picked and shipped there and during the past few weeks tens of thousands of bushels of the choice fruit for which the county is noted have been shipped to points west and south and east while other markets have received their share."

"And while we are talking of the general prosperity in Adams County we must not forget to mention stock and poultry. Frequently we hear of the big prices brought by the fancy stock raised here while the more or less ordinary stock also brings prices that are more than satisfactory to the county farmer. Chickens and turkeys are bringing in handsome returns, and the farmers of this county have nothing of which to complain. For us the Thanksgiving season is most appropriate for everything has been our way."

COMING IN FORCE

A dispatch from Carlisle says: "Encouraged by her great victory at Annapolis Saturday, Dickinson College foot ball team is working harder than ever to defeat Gettysburg at the battlefield town Saturday. The fight between these old rivals will be a hot one. Dickinson will run an excursion to Gettysburg, taking over a big lot of rooters and in all probability the college band. A rate from Carlisle of fifty cents for the round trip has been obtained."

"Dickinson's foot ball practice yesterday was first class. More than 300 Dickinson rooters will take in the event Saturday. The lineup against Conway Hall was fast and furiously played, both teams showing improvement. Fundamentals and signals were given attention. The coaches expect to have some alumni assistance today to pay special attention to line and backfield. Comparative scores indicate that Gettysburg and Dickinson are about evenly matched. Coach Crooks is making good with Dickinson, and his two weeks' work is beginning to tell."

FIRST TIME IN HUNDRED YEARS

Tuesday's Election the First in a Century at which no County Officials were Elected. Due to Constitutional Amendments.

For the first time in one hundred years no county officials were elected at the November election, this old custom being done away with by the constitutional amendments adopted in 1909. They provide for the election of state officers in even numbered years and judges and county officers in odd numbered years.

In 1911 elections for judge will be held in counties where judicial elections would have occurred this year before the amendments were adopted. Elections will also be held next year in judicial districts where appointments were made this year to fill vacancies.

This is the contention of Hanson W. Taylor at present president of the Board of Poor Directors and he withdrew his name from the ballot as a Republican nominee to prosecute this argument. Mr. Sharretts therefore had no opposition.

Gettysburg's borough council will hold over for nine extra months on account of the amendments and the three councilmen whose term would otherwise have retired this coming March will serve until January 1912. All other borough officials whose terms would expire in February will do the same the spring election being a thing of the past.

With the great amount of interest manifested Tuesday when so few offices were to be filled it is not easy to imagine what will happen presidential and other years when, in addition to numerous borough offices, national and other issues of importance are at stake.

IRA S. EBERLY

Ira S. Eberly, one of the most prominent business men of Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, and well known here, died Sunday evening at 8.30 o'clock at his home in that town, after a short sickness.

Mr. Eberly was 63 years of age and was at the head of one of the oldest business concerns in Mechanicsburg, the L. F. Eberly's Sons Lumber Company. He was also connected with other business interests of Mechanicsburg, being a director in the First National Bank and the D. Wilcox Manufacturing Company and a member of the Washington Fire Company. For many years he was director of the Singer band and was one of the finest cornet players in the Cumberland Valley.

He is survived by a wife and four children, Guy M. Eberly, who was associated with him in business; Mrs. Bessie Lantz, of Harrisburg, and Miss Miriam, and one brother, David, who reside in the West.

ST. BERNARD DOGS.

These Famous Life Saving Animals Are Said to Be Mongrels.

Among American tourists in Switzerland there is much rivalry for securing "real" St. Bernards to take home with them. They evidently do not know that the St. Bernards are mongrels. The original St. Bernards saw the light toward the end of the fourteenth century. The mother was a Wallis shepherd dog, the sire a mongrel of a Great Dane and a Spanish mountain mastiff.

In the winter of 1812 nearly all the dogs lost their lives in the snow. In 1816 the last St. Bernard dog died. But a monk of Martigny had a mongrel St. Bernard, and this was crossed with Wallis sheep dogs. The breeding being done in scientific manner, the present race of St. Bernards, though mongrel, like the first, is better and stronger than the old ones, it is said.

The railways have made use of St. Bernards almost unnecessary now, yet they continue on the old stand in winter when the snow lies high. Only the male dogs are used for rescuing men in distress. They are followed by men on snowshoes, who carry provisions. Each of the older dogs has one or more young companions, which he teaches the business.—Boston Post.

Y. M. C. A. TO GIVE PLAY

The Young Men's Christian Association have decided to give a musical comedy "The Gibson Family Reunion" on Thursday evening, November 24.

They have arranged for the production to be drilled by the Bock Entertainment Co. of Wilkes Barre. This company has made a business of home talent entertainments for 15 years and is the most successful company of its kind in existence. Miss Bock, the owner and manager of the company and author of "Gibson Family Reunion," also wrote "County Fair" and "Union Depot," both of which have been given in Gettysburg.

The Gibson Family Reunion is in two acts. The first shows the Gibson Family preparing for the Reunion. The second shows the assembly of guests at the reunion, with Mrs. Gibson introducing specialties, choruses, dances, etc., for the entertainment of her guests.

This two set musical comedy was written by Annie Sara Bock, of the Bock Entertainment Company, a West Virginian, who had made the drilling and producing of home talent plays a specialty—this play has been her biggest and most successful.

One of the big features in "The Family Reunion" is the children's chorus by 200 little girls between the ages of three and nine years. It is said to be one of the prettiest and cutest ever. There will be another children's chorus and six young men and young ladies choruses. All of these are the latest, chiest song productions and are presented in a beautiful, attractive manner.

LIQUOR FIGHT IN FLORIDA
Voted on State Wide Prohibition and Both Sides Claim Victory.
Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 9.—Interest in the election in Florida, centered in the state wide prohibition contest. A constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of all liquors in the state was voted upon. Both sides claim victory and the official canvass will be required. The indications are that the anti-prohibitionists have carried the election by about 2000 majority, but this is by no means certain.
The Republicans had no ticket in the field for congress or for state offices. The present congressional delegation, S. M. Parkman, from the First district; Frank Clark, from the Second, and D. H. Mays, from the Third, were all re-elected by larger majorities than usual, the only opposition being Socialists in the First and Third, and Socialist and Independent in the Second.

DELAWARE REPUBLICAN
Insures Re-election of Dupont to United States Senate.
Wilmington, Del., Nov. 9.—The returns from Delaware arrived slowly. The indications are that the state has gone Republican by a safe majority. This includes the legislature. If this should be borne out, as is expected, Senator Dupont, Republican, will be re-elected Representative in Congress. Head, administration Republican, is re-elected. In Wilmington the Republicans elected three of the five legislative representatives.
A Republican state senator is also elected. Alden B. Richardson, Republican, son of United States Senator Richardson, is elected to the state senate from Kent county. In rural New Castle county all of the county outside of Wilmington, the wets defeated the dries in a local option election.

THE VOTE IN MARYLAND
Five Democrats and One Republican Elected to Congress.
Baltimore, Md., Nov. 9.—Maryland elected five Democrats and one Republican congressman, a gain of two for the Democrats. The last delegation was composed of three Republicans and three Democrats. The congressmen elected are: First district, J. Harry Covington, Dem., re-elected; Second, J. Fred Talbot, Dem., re-elected; Third, George Koehn, Dem., who succeeds John Krommiller, Rep.; Fourth, J. Charles Linthicum, Dem.; Fifth, David J. Lewis, Dem., who succeeds George A. Pear, Rep.
The tariff and high prices of food were the strong pleas made by the Democratic candidates.
Republicans Lose in Illinois.
Chicago, Nov. 9.—The Republican state committee claims the state election of only six out of the twenty-five congressmen from Illinois. It was conceded that eight were still in doubt, with the probability that most of the Republicans would be defeated, and the other eleven districts were conceded to the Democrats. The Democrats have but six members in the present Illinois delegation.

Arkansas Democratic.
Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 9.—Arkansas voted for congressmen alone, the state election having taken place in September. The state returns a full Democratic delegation to congress as follows: Macon, Oldfield, Floyd, Robinson, Jacaway, succeeding Charles C. Reid; Goodwin, succeeding Minor Wallace.
Roosevelt's Congressman Defeated.
New York, Nov. 9.—Returns from Colonel Roosevelt's congressional district indicate the election of Littleton, Dem., over Cocks, Rep., by 300, which is just about the plurality which the Democratic candidate got in the colonel's home county of Nassau.
Alleged Briber Re-elected.
Ottawa, Ill., Nov. 9.—Lee O'Neill Browne, acquitted of bribery in the Lorimer election scandal, has been re-elected to the state legislature.

The readers of this paper, will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. WILSON WINS IN NEW JERSEY
Democrat Gubernatorial Candidate Elected by 20,000.
U. S. SENATOR IN DOUBT
But Republicans May Keep Control of the Legislature — Lewis Loses in Southern Part of State.
Trenton, N. J., Nov. 9.—Woodrow Wilson, Democrat, was elected governor of New Jersey, defeating Vivian M. Lewis, Republican, by a plurality of 20,000. This may be greatly increased when complete returns have been received.
Whether the Democratic landslide for the head of the ticket will carry with it control of the legislature and the election of a Democratic United States senator is in doubt.
The early indications were that the Republicans would remain in control of both the senate and assembly. They surely will control the senate.
The earliest returns were from the few voting machines scattered throughout the state, but these showed figures so pronouncedly for Wilson that there was little question as to what would be the result when fuller returns were received.
Lewis had expected the large counter vote in North Jersey to go heavily against him, but believed he would more than make up these losses in the Republican strongholds of South Jersey, especially in Camden and Atlantic counties.
When the Camden county voting machine returns showed that Lewis was running far behind Ford and figures from several of the other usually very strong Republican counties were likewise discouraging to the Republicans, they saw it was only a matter of how great would be Wilson's plurality.
Not even the most sanguine of the election prophets in Democratic ranks had predicted returns so favorable to Wilson, and the Republican leaders at the headquarters here attributed the overthrow of their candidate as largely due to the great feeling of unrest and the Democratic landslide that had been threatening for some time to sweep the country.
What is considered by some as a master stroke on the part of the Wilson campaign managers came to light when it was noted that the packages of Wilson "stickers" for use on Republican ballots bore the "union label" trademark. Most of the Lewis stickers likewise bore the label, but in Wilson's case it was especially significant by reason of the question that arose during the campaign as to whether the Democratic nominee was a friend of organized labor.

FOSS ELECTED GOVERNOR
Democratic Gubernatorial Candidate Wins by 24,000 Plurality.
Boston, Nov. 9.—Congressman Eugene N. Foss was elected governor of Massachusetts by a plurality of 24,000. The remainder of the Republican ticket went into office.
The defeat of Governor Eben S. Draper, the Republican nominee, is

EUGENE N. FOSS.
Due to the agitation over the increased cost of necessities and the outcry that the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill is one of the chief causes.
The incoming legislature will show large Democratic gains, but there are still enough Republicans to insure the re-election of Senator Lodge, even should there be a fusion of Democrats and what few anti-Lodge Republicans who may have crept in.

North Dakota Republican.
Fargo, N. D., Nov. 9.—This state has elected a Republican legislature, which insures the re-election of McCumber to the United States senate, and the election of Congressman Ronna to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Johnson. Both Republican candidates for congress have won.
Caleb Powers Goes to Congress.
Louisville, Ky., Nov. 9.—Caleb Powers, in the Eleventh district, is the only Republican congressman elected. He won by 3000.
Pastor's Bad Example.
The temperate citizen had promised the clergyman that he would that night take just another drink and come to service on the morrow.
On Monday the clergyman chided the citizen for not having kept his word. "You promised me you'd take just another drink; see how many you've had since."
"Yes," retorted the man astutely, "yesterday morning you said, 'Now, just another word,' and see how many more you gave us after that."—Widow.

WINS IN NEW JERSEY.
Woodrow Wilson, Democrat, is Elected Governor.

ROOSEVELT IS SILENT
Republicans Lose Probably Enough to Cost Them Contest.
New York, Nov. 9.—At the Democratic congressional headquarters in this city it is asserted that the Republicans have lost control of congress.
Returns from New England states, New York and New Jersey indicate that the Republicans have lost enough seats in congress to turn the control over to the Democrats.
Speaker Cannon has been re-elected in Danville, Ill.
Nicholas Longworth has been re-elected in Ohio.
The veteran Denby has been defeated in Michigan.
The Massachusetts majority in congress has fallen off. A striking example to show the trend of the voting in Massachusetts for members of congress is found in the Twelfth district, where Weeks' majority two years ago of 12,000 is reduced to 5000.
There are notable Republican reverses in the New York state congressional delegation. It looks as if every Republican candidate for congress in the city of New York was defeated, with the possible exception of Herbert Parsons, who has pulled up in the running against Jefferson M. Levy in the later returns. Forty-two election districts in the Thirtieth senatorial district show that Levy has a majority over Parsons by only about 100. J. Sloat Fassett in the Thirty-third congressional district, is probably defeated.
One of the hottest congressional fights in New York state was in the First district, where Cocks, Colonel Roosevelt's personal congressman, was defeated by Martin W. Littleton.
While nothing like final or authoritative congressional figures can be given, the indications are that the house will be Democratic by a very small majority, perhaps as small as from ten to twelve.
The Republicans held their own in Pennsylvania, the Eleventh congressional district being the only one known to be absolutely lost to the Republicans at this time.

Georgia Solidly Democratic.
Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 9.—Georgia's delegation in the next congress will be as follows: First district, Charles G. Edwards, Dem., incumbent; Second, A. S. Roddenberry, Dem., incumbent; Third, Dudley M. Hughes, Dem., incumbent; Fifth, William S. Howard, Dem.; Sixth, Charles L. Bartlett, Dem., incumbent; Seventh, Gordon Lee, Dem., incumbent; Eighth, Samuel J. Tribble, Dem.; Ninth, Thomas M. Bell, Dem., incumbent; Tenth, Thomas W. Hardwick, Dem., incumbent; Eleventh, William G. Brantley, Dem., incumbent. Only congressmen were elected. Governor, state house officers and the legislature were chosen in October.
Slight Interest in South Carolina.
Charleston, S. C., Nov. 9.—Slight interest was manifested in the election in this state, the vote from reports received being about as usual. South Carolina always polls a light vote in general elections, all Democratic nominations in primaries being equivalent to election.
The state ticket, led by Colman Bleasde, was practically unopposed. Socialists having put out a gubernatorial candidate who received a few scattering votes. A solid Democratic congressional delegation was returned. The legislature, of course, is Democratic.
Idaho Elects Republican.
Boise, Idaho, Nov. 9.—Returns indicate the election of the entire Republican ticket, headed by Brady for governor, but by reduced majorities. French, an insurgent, seems certain of election to congress. The legislature will be Republican, but there is no United States senator to elect. The only issue is submission of a state wide prohibition amendment.

TENER WINS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Republican Nominee Elected by Reduced Plurality.

GRIM HOPELESSLY LOST

Berry, Keystone Candidate, Ran Second and Was Strong in Western Counties.

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—Pennsylvania, the bulwark for years of Republicanism, held her own and elected a Republican governor, returned a legislature overwhelmingly Republican and will also send to congress a great majority of Republicans.

It is estimated that the plurality of John K. Tener, Republican candidate for governor, will reach 25,000. Grim, the Democratic candidate, is hopelessly lost.

Hon. John Dalzell, Republican, was re-elected in the Thirtieth congressional district.

The Keystone leaders had confidently claimed the western part of the state for their candidate, William H. Berry, but returns from the western counties seemed to show that Tener would have a safe plurality there, too.

If the ratio of the early returns from Allegheny county is maintained the Republican nominee will carry that county by a plurality of about 25,000.

There was an unusually heavy vote at the polls in all parts of the state, and workers for the three big parties beat every effort to getting out every follower who had registered. In western Pennsylvania particularly the fight was waged with a fierceness that stirred many a chronic stay-at-home pollwaller.

Throughout the state the split ticket seemed to predominate. There was so much cutting that the voting progressed slower than usual and kept the polls thronged almost all the time. Though there was show and rain in many counties this had little effect on the vote.

Reports from Pittsburg and the western counties indicated a sentiment for Berry that was said to surprise even the Keystone leaders. Betting there favored the Keystone ticket.

Secretary of State Philander C. Knox went to Pittsburg to vote, but was unable to do so because he had neglected to register.

In the central counties the state tickets ran a neck and neck race, although in most of these counties the election of local Republicans is predicted. Lancaster county expects to send almost the entire Republican delegation to the state legislature.

Reports from West Chester declare that the re-election of Congressman Thomas S. Butler, Republican, in the Chester-Delaware district, is generally conceded.

CONNECTICUT DEMOCRATIC

Democratic Candidate, Who Was Scored by Roosevelt, Elected Governor.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 9.—Judge Simeon E. Baldwin, Democrat, was elected governor of Connecticut by a plurality of 6090.

The Republicans admit that the congressional seat in the Second district, long held by N. D. Sperry, dean of the house, is in danger of going to Thomas L. Reilly, Democrat.

SIMEON BALDWIN.

The Republicans have so many local lights on their hands that indications point to a gain of from 60 to 70 seats in the general assembly for the Democrats. The use of the Australian ballot for the first time at a general election and the expected closeness of the vote for governor have raised speculation as to the possibility of the election being thrown into the courts over protested ballots thrown out by local moderators.

Republicans Carry Wisconsin.
Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 9.—The Republicans gained a sweeping victory in Wisconsin, electing F. E. McGovern, the gubernatorial candidate, by 50,000 and returning LaFollette to the senate by an even greater plurality.

How Tortoise Shell Is Worked.

The soldering of two pieces of tortoise shell together is effected by means of hot plinchers, which while they compress, soften the opposed edges of each piece and unite them into one. Even the rasings and pow into fine fragments are put into molds and subjected to the action of boiling water and thus made into plates of the desired thickness or into various articles which appear to have been cut out of a solid block.

STRATEGY

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

"I want one of you men for a special service," said the sergeant, coming into the station excitedly. "There's been a robbery in the city in which a storekeeper was shot dead. The robber carried a bundle under his arm and after spending a few minutes in the back of the store came out in a policeman's uniform. Later some people went into the store, found the safe robbed of $2,000 and the storekeeper dead. They saw the robber go in and were puzzled to see him come out as one of us. He's been seen out on the Blimington road."

The sergeant stopped a moment for breath, then turning to me, said:

"Henshaw, mount and ride out on Baker street till you come to the fountain, leave your horse in the stable near by, walk back by the Blimington road and see if you can't meet him. Pretend you don't know him and take him by strategy. If he's gone for in the regular way he'll dodge us. You can do it."

I obeyed my order, which was given me because I had done some neat jobs in just such fashion and had been told by the sergeant that he'd rather have me go for a man alone than twenty others together. Sometimes I worked in plain clothes, but in this case I saw like a flash that I could do much better in uniform. I hadn't been on the Blimington road ten minutes before I saw a cop some distance away walking toward me. He was coming along with the deliberate tread of a roundsman on his beat and so like the real thing that I dared not hope he was the man I was after.

But I noticed as soon as he caught sight of me he began to swing his club as we often do when patrolling. It gave him away, since it indicated a bit of nervousness on seeing a policeman. I walked on, pretending to see something interesting to my right, stopped, peered at the imaginary object for a few minutes, as though I had struck something that might require a policeman's attention, then went on.

When I and my man met I stopped and asked carefully if he had passed any one of the force. He was perfectly cool, but I knew well he was the man wanted. He told me he had met two roundsmen back a short distance going rapidly, as though something was in the wind; that he had asked if they wished his services and they had told him to stick to his beat and keep his eyes open, but that if he met one of the force he should send him after them.

"You're very foxy," I said in my mind, "but I'm out gunning myself for some one more stupid than I."

"I think I know what they're after," I said to the man. "There's been a murder and robbery committed in the city. I think they're looking for the person that did it. We get no thanks for helping those on a scout, and I'm not going after them. But I wonder why they told you to keep a lookout here. This is no place to expect that party."

"Don't know, but I must be getting on. Mornin'."

But he dare not trust me with his back turned toward me. He went half sidling and half backing for a few yards, keeping me in sight, and I believed he had a revolver concealed in his right sleeve.

"What do you say," I said to him, "to going into the saloon on the corner for a glass?"

He didn't know just what to do. The advantages might be in the direction of the saloon and they might not. What he wanted was to shake me and he was not successful. Finally, seeing that to refuse he must walk on with his back to me, rather than give me such an advantage, he said he'd go to the saloon, though he pretended he feared to be reported.

We walked across the road side by side and up the street to the saloon. At the door I gave way for him to enter first, but he was not to be outdone in politeness, refusing point blank to expose his back, so I, who felt a reasonable certainty that I was in no danger from him, passed in first.

We stood up at the bar. I asked my brother policeman what he would have and gave the order. We faced a large mirror and could both see our faces in it. I noticed that my man never took his eye from my reflection for a moment. Whether he suspected me or not I didn't know, but I did know that he realized that I was losing precious moments. The longer I kept him not only the more likelihood was there that he would be taken, but the more nervous he became.

I knew that there would be one moment when he would be obliged to take his eyes off my reflection; that was when he poured out his liquor. He needed a bracer or I believe he would have made some excuse to decline to drink. I noticed when he took up the bottle his hand trembled. Not till the fluid began to go from the bottle to the glass did he lower his eye, and then only for two or three seconds. But they were all I wanted. I clutched his right arm and shook it violently. His weapon dropped to the floor, and I planted my foot on it. Then I put both arms around him and held him in a bear hug.

"The rest was easy. I told the barkeeper to telephone for the police, but before they came I had released my hold and drawn my club. By this time my man had given up and submitted to the bracelets."

England's Smallest House.
The smallest house in Great Britain is in the quaint old town of Conway, north Wales. This house is 200 years old and consists of two rooms, one above the other, each of which is just two yards square. The upstairs room, which is reached by mounting a tiny ladder, has in it a four foot bed and a washstand, leaving but little room for the occupant to move about.

JOHN A. DIX.
Elected Governor of New York
on Democratic Ticket.

INDIANA IN DOUBT

Vote Is Very Close, With Democrats In the Lead.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 9.—Reports from about one-third of the state outside of Marion county show that the vote is very close on the state ticket, but that the Democrats are leading by a slight majority.

In order to overcome the vote of 1906, with which comparisons are being made, they must gain nine votes to the average gain is about seven to the precinct, with only a small percentage of the country precincts reported.

While the Republican legislative ticket, consisting of eight candidates for representative and one candidate for senator, is making a better showing than the state ticket, there is no possibility of its being elected.

This counts strongly against Senator Beveridge, and his managers are greatly discouraged over the vote in this county. They admit that the outlook is bad, but they don't concede that the legislature will be Democratic, though the indications are now that it will be.

HARMON CARRIES OHIO

Democratic Governor Re-elected by 50,000 Plurality.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 9.—Ohio joined in the Democratic landslide by re-electing Governor Judson Harmon by a plurality which the Democratic state headquarters estimates at better than 50,000.

The state ticket under the governorship is in doubt. The legislature also is in doubt, though Democratic victories in Lucas, Hamilton, Cuyahoga and other big counties indicates a possible Democratic majority on joint ballot.

The election of only a few congressmen is assured, those certainly elected being: J. H. Geeske, 19th, Fourth district; W. A. Ashbrook, Dem., Seventeenth; James M. Cox, Dem., Third; Nicholas Longworth, Rep., First; Jas. Cassidy, Twenty-first, and Paul Howland, Twentieth, both Republicans, are probably defeated by R. H. Bulkley and William Gordon, Democrats.

Rhode Island Elects Republicans.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 9.—The re-election of Republican congressman, Republican governor and state ticket is indicated. For governor, Lewis A. Waterman, the Democratic candidate has reduced over 1000 Governor Pothier's figures of last year, when Pothier had a plurality of nearly 12,000. In spite of this inward showing Republicans claim Pothier's re-election by at least 5000 plurality and the election of the rest of the state ticket is conceded.

Result In North Carolina.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 9.—Steadman Dem., for congress in the Fifth district, polled heavier majority than was anticipated. May reach 2500, defeating Blair, Rep., for seat now held by Moorehead, Rep. Cowles, Rep., in the Eighth, is re-elected by reduced majority. It is impossible to tell at present whether Grant, Rep., is re-elected in the Tenth. Majority will not be over 500 either way. McIntosh, Rep., polled a heavy vote in the Ninth, but Webb, Dem., is re-elected. The state went Democratic by 30,000.

DIX CARRIES NEW YORK

Democrats Sweep State For Governor and Entire Ticket.

BLOW TO COL. ROOSEVELT

The Entire State Ticket Is Elected For the First Time Since 1894—Republicans Lost Several Congressmen.

New York, Nov. 9.—New York state elected the whole Democratic state ticket. Dix, Democrat, defeated Stimson, Republican, for governor by 100,000 plurality. For the first time since 1894 the Democrats will control the executive departments of the state government after Jan. 1.

In 1906 Hughes, Republican, carried the state by a plurality of 57,897 over Hearst, Democrat, and in 1908, a presidential year, Hughes beat Chanler, a Democrat, by 69,462.

This year the candidates for minor offices on the Democratic ticket ran well up with Stimson.

In 1906 the Democratic candidates for all state offices except governor were elected. In 1902 Cuneen, Democrat and Prohibition, was elected attorney general. With these exceptions the men elected are the first Democrats chosen to office since 1894, when Flower was elected governor.

Dix Got Labor Vote.

The railroad labor vote, as shown by returns from Hornell and other railroad traffic centers up the state, has gone against the Republicans, notwithstanding the strenuous efforts of Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Hearst's newspapers to make the tag of "thirteen hours a day" stick to John A. Dix.

Congressman Herbert Parsons, formerly chairman of the Republican county committee here, is defeated by Jefferson M. Levy, in the Thirtieth district. The election of J. Sloat Fassett, in the Thirty-third district, is in doubt. His home city of Elmira went against him by 1100, and the city of Corning gave 300 plurality for his opponent, Edwin S. Underhill.

In the Oneida-Herkimer senatorial district Senator Davenport, the leader of the insurgents there, is probably defeated. Utica, Vice President Sherman's home city, went against Davenport by 2500.

Congressman Sereno E. Payne, the joint author of the tariff bill, got a black eye in his home city of Auburn, but is re-elected. The Democrats have made gains for the assembly, but it is probable the senate will remain Republican, possibly a majority of three or four.

Roosevelt Loses Home District.

In Roosevelt's own home district, the Fifth of Nassau county, Dix won out with a plurality of 50 votes. The district is normally Republican by 125 votes. The reasons which operated to bring about this result in Roosevelt's own district evidently apply to the whole state of New York, especially so in the farming sections.

The Democratic state headquarters claims that the Democrats have carried the legislature and will elect the successor to Senator Depew.

Returns indicate that the Republicans have lost every congressional district in Manhattan and the Bronx.

The result is regarded as a severe blow to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who made a whirlwind campaign in behalf of Mr. Stimson, who was nominated at the convention of which Mr. Roosevelt was temporary chairman. Those personally and politically opposed to Mr. Roosevelt made a hard fight for Dix.

Henry L. Stimson has sent the following telegram to John A. Dix:

"The present returns indicate your election. I congratulate you and send you my good wishes for the success of our administration."

Dix Renews Platform Pledges.

Thompson, N. Y., Nov. 9.—John A. Dix said: "The crisis has been met by the sober common sense of good citizenship. The door has been opened for reform, retrenchment and honest administration. As governor I shall adhere to the strict performance of the pledges of the party platform."

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Insurgent Republican Elected Governor by 5000 Plurality.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 9.—Robert P. Fass, reform Republican candidate for governor, is elected by a plurality of 5000.

Frank D. Currier is re-elected for congress from the Second district.

Cyrus A. Sullivan is also believed to be elected from the first district by a greatly reduced majority.

The legislature will be Republican by a good margin.

There is no United States senator to be elected this year.

Light Vote In Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 9.—While a light vote was cast over Kentucky, the Democrats carried the following districts: First, Ollie M. James, Dem., no opposition; Second, A. O. Stanley, Dem.; Third, Thomas, Dem., district normally Republican; Fourth, Johnson, Dem.; Fifth, Sherley, Dem. All of the above congressmen were re-elected.

Baldheaded Men

Ignorance of the Hair Causes Much Baldness among Men

Of course you and every intelligent reader of the Gettysburg Times knows that dandruff is caused by a germ.

Dr. Sagerbund, the great French physician, proved this beyond a doubt.

In order to rid your scalp of filthy dandruff you must kill the germ. There is a hair dressing called Parisian Sage which is now sold in every town in America, that is guaranteed to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair, splitting hair and scalp itch in two weeks, or money back.

If you have dandruff get a large 50 cent bottle today and rid yourself of it. Remember that if dandruff germs are not destroyed in time, the hair will surely fall out and baldness will follow.

Here's proof of what Parisian Sage has done; it will do more. It is the finest hair grower and hair dressing in the world, and people who use it regularly will never grow bald. Mrs. John Stoner, Evansville, Ind., writes on June 2, 1910:

"I used Parisian Sage and found it very successful; it removes dandruff and gives the hair life. I only used two bottles. I know it is a cure for dandruff. I know it is a cure for dandruff."

Large bottles 50 cents at The People's Drug Store and druggists everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every carton.

HUMOROUS QUIPS

Fool No. 4-11-44.

A fool there was, and he made his prayer (Even as you and I)
To a rag and sawdust banks of hair (Goodness knows what she wouldn't wear).
But the fool he called her his lady fair (Even as you and I).

Oh, the jeers we waste, and the tears we waste
And the evil things we've said
Are lost on the woman who does not know (As a matter of fact, they never do)
What to wear upon her head.

The fool was frequently horrified (Even as you and I).
A hunk of hair with a head inside (She called a van when she had it dyed)
Was all that he had for his bonnie bride (Even as you and I).

But it isn't the hanks or the woman's pranks
Would win him his decree
If he had the hardihood to sue (The point is that she never knew)
(As a matter of fact, they never do)
Whose hair it used to be.

A Life Picture

Two Who Began and Ended Friends

By H. D. CLEAVER

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Robert Spooner and Lars Gibson at five were going about with their arms around each other's neck; at twelve they enjoyed boys' sports together; at eighteen they conferred as to what field in life's work they should enter.

The bond that drew them together was a dissimilarity of disposition. Spooner was bright, impulsive, daring even to recklessness. He would easily fly into a passion and was quick to do penance for his acts while under its influence. Gibson was of a very equable disposition. His amiability was never seriously interfered with and seldom ruffled. These complementary dispositions welded their hearts when they were children, and the affection born of their tender years was never permanently broken.

Both about the same time secured situations in different mercantile houses. Spooner was very quick to learn and endowed with great natural energy. The consequence was that he advanced rapidly. Gibson was slow in his motions, not over quick to understand, always willing to do what was required of him, patient to a fault and quietly persistent. During these early years of their career Spooner would confer with his friend, complaining of what he called the stupidity of those immediately over him, chafing because he found it difficult to make them understand that he discovered ways of doing things quicker, plainer, more correctly than they.

Gibson would say: "Be patient, Bob. Your natural ability will win in the end, whereas if you try to go too fast you may get a backset that you will be years in making up."

"I know you're right, my boy," Bob would reply. "You're always right about everything, but it's mighty hard to see things going wrong when a suggestion from me would right it and I not make the suggestion."

"How do you know they would appreciate it? And wouldn't they be liable to tell you to keep your place and mind your own business. If you were in their place would you listen to suggestions from them?"

"I listen to suggestions from them! Not much!"

"All things come to those who wait," Bob Spooner could not help feeling himself a better man than his friend in everything except patience, gentleness, endurance. He did not expect Lars to make much headway in the world; indeed, he was ambitious to make a success for himself that he might share it with the man he loved. It was not long before Spooner broke away from his employers and set up for himself. He had no capital, but had a capacity for inspiring confidence. He succeeded from the start.

Both young men married. Spooner wedded a girl who saw in him a means to acquire what was the wish of her life—social prominence. Gibson married a girl who loved money for money's sake rather than what she could acquire with it. Mrs. Spooner spent all her husband's income. Mrs. Gibson exerted herself to prevent her husband from giving away all his family did not positively require. From the time of their marriage their wives stepped into their shoes and enacted the balance of their lives for them. No, not all; at the end they acted for themselves.

It was their desire that their wives should feel as warm a friendship for each other as was theirs. Spooner, with his natural enthusiasm, expected this; Gibson, with a certain longheadedness or horse sense, knew that it could not be. There was nothing to bring the two women together—indeed, there was that to drive them apart. Each wife was jealous of the influence exerted by her husband's friend. "It is singular," Mrs. Spooner would say, "how you can see so much in that dull fellow. You are more capable in every way." And Mrs. Gibson would say, "Your friend Spooner looks down on you; he considers himself vastly your superior."

Spooner made money so fast that the very rapidity of his accumulations accelerated his accumulative desires, just as a man owning an automobile that will do forty miles an hour desires one that will do sixty. One morning the newspapers announced the failure of a large and long established banking house. It was the signal gun for the opening of a commercial panic. The house of Spooner & Co. went down in the crash, and the head of the firm was obliged to take the benefit of the bankruptcy law.

For two or three years values shrank. Gibson, who had saved—or, rather, whose wife had saved—considerable money, saw an opportunity to buy property cheap and made investments which when the financial pendulum swung to the other extreme made him rich. Meanwhile Spooner was freeing himself from the wreck of his business and when he had done so found himself more than forty years old, without the physical energy of youth with which to make a new beginning and without a dollar of capital.

The Rude Barber.

A farmer from Minnesota entered a barber shop at Butte for the purpose of getting his hair cut. The rural one's locks had an odd, ragged look, and, after regarding them scornfully for a moment, the barber demanded brusquely:

"Say, who cut your hair the last time?"

"My wife," said the farmer, with an uneasy smile.

"She did, eh?" said the barber. "What did she do it with—a knife and fork?"—Lippincott's.

His old friend called on him and said:

"Bob, I can let you have $20,000 on a nominal interest and without security. I would double it; but, you see, my wife and children have their claim on me, and I don't feel that I have the right to do more."

Spooner grasped his friend's hand, but said nothing for a time, then told Gibson he would consider the matter. When Mrs. Spooner heard of the offer she advised her husband to accept it, but showed such antagonism to the donor that Spooner resolved to decline the loan. Indeed, the sum was not large enough to put him on his feet as he wished, and he preferred to manipulate certain banks with which he had done business to raise twenty times the amount. He failed in this and was obliged to take a subordinate position in the employ of another.

Gibson was now very prosperous. He had never made money fast except during the recovery from the panic, when the values of the property he had bought expanded as rapidly as they had contracted. His wife set up a carriage and two or three automobiles. The couple purchased the Spooner home that Spooner might redeem it when again able to do so. But as time passed it did not appear that Spooner would ever be able to do so. Had it not been for the influence of Gibson's wife he would have yielded to his affection for his old friend and offered to deed the place back to him.

And now came one of those combinations of circumstances calculated to drive apart instead of weld together those who love. Robert Spooner as a young man had desired to accumulate partly that he might help the friend whom he looked upon as his inferior. He now saw that inferior in a position to help him. Had he been unflinched he might have stood the strain occasioned by jealousy. But Mrs. Spooner, disappointed in not being able to retain the grip she had secured on society, smarting at seeing the man whose influence over her husband she had disliked successful while Spooner was a failure, began a series of innuendoes against Gibson. These had no effect at first, but, being followed up pertinaciously, at last infected the subject on whom she worked.

Finally Spooner, seeing a rare opportunity, made a desperate effort to interest certain men with capital, succeeded and with one of these brilliant strokes for which he had formerly been remarkable made a fortune. As soon as Gibson heard of the fact he sent a note to his friend offering to sell him his former home at the price he had paid for it, which was about half its present valuation. But the poison was in Spooner's blood, and he replied curtly that the place would not now be commensurate with his altered fortunes.

From that time there was a continued effort on the part of the Spooners to flaunt their position in the face of the Gibsons—that is, on the part of Mrs. Spooner. What her husband did was inspired by her. But this Gibson didn't know, and he felt his old friend's antagonism keenly. The Spooners grew richer, and the richer they grew the more they snubbed the Gibsons. Mrs. Spooner's chief desire seemed to be to make them understand that while they had thousands the Gibsons had millions and that there was as wide a difference in the social position of the two families as there was in their financial position.

And so it came that the two friends drifted apart. Both retired from business, and both were old men. Neither had any use for the money he had accumulated beyond a bare living. Whatever enjoyment there was in wealth was derived by their families. Friends had dropped away, and the old men were companionable with no one. One evening while Mrs. Spooner was entertaining a house full of guests her husband, letting himself out through a back door, walked into the street. He felt the desolation of a homeless man.

Passing a cafe that had been in the same location for half a century, where he and Gibson had in their youth met for a bite, a glass of beer and to talk over their affairs, he was seized with a melancholy desire to go in and sit in the old familiar seat. As he approached the stall he found it occupied by an old man. He was about to pass on when he heard his name spoken. Turning, he saw the veteran in the booth looking at him intently.

"Bob?"

"Lars?"

They sat side by side, as they had done when boys just entering upon their careers, remaining for a time hand in hand like two lovers. The past was not referred to.

"Lars," said Spooner, "here we are in the place from which we started, successful in the end and unable to enjoy the results of our success. The only marked effect it has had has been to separate us. What use was there in the struggle after all?"

"Without the interest we took in it we would have always been what we are today—men without life. Our children are enjoying it, or at least they think they are, but I doubt if their lives have the intensity in them that ours have had. We love our wives and them, but there is a different affection which they cannot supply—it is that which we feel for each other."

The place had run down since they were there as boys, but it was all they required. They met often during the remainder of their lives in that old booth, before which a curtain could be drawn to shut them from the view of others. One night a waiter, entering to tell them that the closing hour had come, found them sitting hand in hand, both dead.
